CENSUS UPDATE

---NEWS AND COMMUNITY RELEASE---

(August 6, 2010)--- The City of Hartford is thankful to everyone who supported and participated in the Census 2010 campaign. However, there's more work to do. As part of quality assurance, Census workers may call or visit households. These final steps are to ensure that the most accurate data is presented so that the City can maximize federal funds for the next ten years.

“Participation is essential. Hartford cannot afford to jeopardize federal funding that would support our children, our seniors, or our representation in Washington D.C.,” said Mayor Pedro Segarra.

Frequently asked questions regarding this stage of the Census are “If I already responded, why contact me again?” The reason could be its difficult to read the answer or to simply clarify it. You may receive a visit to confirm an address or if there's a duplicate address. Census officials say that this would affect a small percentage of households.
