MEETING OF THE MAYORS

---NEWS RELEASE---

(August 31, 2010)--- Mayor Pedro E. Segarra has begun meeting with former Mayors of Hartford to seek their wisdom and advice. Today, he met with Mayor James Kinsella who served from 1957 to 1960.

“It is essential that I learn from those who have been down this road before so that I have a more complete understanding of where the City was and where it can be. I am certain I will take lessons learned from each of them, as I am from meeting with current town and city mayors, to help Hartford grow and prosper,” said Mayor Segarra.

“There’s an unrecorded history of Hartford that you can only get by meeting with the wise men and women who have led our City. We need to tap into those resources. My first meeting with Mayor Kinsella was inspiring, confirmed the sense of responsibility owed to our residents, and I was amazed to see how much he has contributed and continues to contribute to our community,” added Mayor Segarra.

Below, Mayor Kinsella receives a Hartford 375 lapel pin from Mayor Segarra in honor of the Capital City’s 375th Anniversary.
